Scenes of Great St. Louis Convention.
Teller and Silver Delegates Bolt.
Foreign Policy Plank—Harrison Administration Endorsed—Gold Plank

The Call's Headquarters, Southern Hotel,
St. Louis, Mo., June 18.
At ten minutes to six o'clock tonight the booming of cannon in front of the delegates and spectators cheered lustily for more than ten minutes. The band would occasionally strike up "Marching Through Georgia," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," "The Red, White and Blue" and "Yankee Doodle," trying to quell the uproar, but no sooner had the band finished one air than the immense congregation of nearly 14,000 people would take up the refrain and sing with a volume that shook the rafters of the convention hall. The racket would then almost subside, but would again be precipitated by the Ohio men in the gallery, who manipulated a huge crayon portrait of McKinley. Finally the great crowd, having tired itself out, subsided and business was proceeded with.

The first two days of the convention were quiet enough. There was not so much noisy demonstration. But today's session was marked by scenes that will live in the memories of all spectators.
The whole city is talking tonight about the wonderful popularity of the Repubthere by St. Peter with a golden key." As he sat down he was loudly cheered.

Foraker Names McKinley.

When the State of Ohio was called, Joseph B. Foraker of that State, ex-Governor and Senator-elect, came to the platform and amid great applause proceeded to put Mr. McKinley in nomination. In the course of his speech Foraker spoke as follows:
"So far we have not made any mistake. We have adopted a platform which, notwithstanding the scenes witnessed in this hall this morning, meets the demands and expectations of the American people. It remains for us, as the last crowning act of our work, to meet again that expectation in the nomination of our candidates.
"What is that expectation? What is it that the people want. They want their candidate something more than a good business man (alluding to Mr.
Depew's characterization of Governor Morton). They want something more than a good Republican. They want something more than a popular leader.
They want something more than a wise political statesman. They want a man who embodies in himself not only these essential qualifications, but those in addition which in the highest possible degree typify, in name, in character, in record, in ambition, in purpose the exact opposite of all that is signified and represented by that free trade, deficitmaking, bond-issuing, labor-assassin-had been brought into the convention hall earlier in the proceedings, were uncovered and waved, while almost every delegate seemed to be wildly gesticulating with either a fan or a flag in the air. The band tried in vain to compete with the ear-splitting clamor, but at last the strains of "Marching Through Georgia" caught the ears of the crowd and it joined in the chorus and gradually quieted down.

Then a portrait of McKinley was hoisted on a line with the United States flag on the gallery, facing the platform, and the cheering began over again, to which the band responded by playing "Rally Round the Flag," the convention joining in the chorus.

After at least twelve minutes of this kind of proceeding the chair began to rap for a restoration of order, but without avail. Governor Foraker stood throughout all this wild scene smiling his approval.

Mr. Hepburn of Iowa had in the meantime been called to the chair by Senator Thurston, but just when he had nearly restored order Mrs. H. W. E.
Strong of California, who had presented the plumes in honor of Ohio's choice, made her appearance on the floor waving one of them, and another uncon-convention hall announced to the people of St. Louis that William McKinley of Ohio had been nominated for President of the United States by the Republican national convention. Following this signal given by the cannon, the locomotive, mill and steamboat whistles on the Mississippi river joined in a shrill screaming. Brass bands immediately commenced their noisy parades through the principal streets. It was just growing dark, and enterprising and patriotic merchants fired off rockets and Roman candles as the bands passed.

Although McKinley's nomination was expected by everybody, the anticipation followed by crowds, are parading the down town streets, rockets and Roman candles illuminate the sky in every direction. Seldom before has a presidential candidate been nominated under such auspicious circumstances.

All good Republicans are in line. The friends of Reed, Allison, Morton and Quay are hearty in their enthusiasm for Major McKinley as if they had not espoused the candidacy of their own favorites.

When the president directed the call of States for nominations for the presidency, the first State to respond was Iowa, when R. M. Baldwin of Council Bluffs came to the platform and nominated Senator W. B. Allison of Iowa.

The speech was an eloquent one and was loudly applauded at some points.

At this point pandemonium was let After twenty-five minutes of inces-

He said that from what had occurred it was evident that the convention had heard of the candidate before. His
